

The FCC has no right to prevent XM or any other company from producing and marketing a product unless these companies break the law.....In my business I'm under the competitive pressures from India in the software market but I refuse to run to Uncle Sam and cry for protection, instead I need to figure out ways to be more competitive...If these broadcasters (NAB) don't like Satellite radio because it is a threat to their business, they need to figure out how to stay in the game and be competitive without intervention from the US government....After all this is the land of the Brave and the home of the FREE.....